

The Ghanaian Crypto User's Guide to Paying Less in Fees

Keep more of your money every time you buy, sell, send, receive or convert cryptocurrency.

Who this guide is for

This guide is for anyone in Ghana who uses cryptocurrency to receive payments, send money, convert crypto into Mobile Money or cash, or buy and sell crypto. The goal is simple: help you keep more of your money.

1. Choosing the first option you see

Why it costs you money: Compare at least two platforms before converting. Small differences in exchange rates can become significant over time.

What smart users do: Always compare the final amount you'll receive, not just the advertised rate.

2. Ignoring hidden charges

Why it costs you money: Many people only look at one fee and forget about network fees, exchange rate markups and service charges.

What smart users do: Check the total cost before confirming.

3. Sending money too quickly

Why it costs you money: Scammers often create urgency.

What smart users do: Pause for one minute and verify wallet addresses and recipient details.

4. Trusting unknown sellers

Why it costs you money: Cheap prices can become expensive mistakes.

What smart users do: Use trusted platforms or verified merchants.

5. Forgetting transaction records

Why it costs you money: Without proof, resolving disputes becomes difficult.

What smart users do: Save screenshots and transaction IDs.

6. Focusing only on fees

Why it costs you money: A cheaper transaction isn't always a better transaction.

What smart users do: Consider speed, reliability, security and customer support.

7. Repeating the same mistakes

Why it costs you money: Most losses happen because people never review previous transactions.

What smart users do: Spend one minute after every transfer asking what could have been done better.
